The MG is an incredibly fun camera to shoot with. It has an easily understood aperture-priority interface. It does lack manual shutter speed settings, however, and that makes this a poor choice for a photography class. For shooting with, easily obtaining good exposures, and having reliable, consistent results, this is a great camera.

Pentax created perhaps the single most unreliable 35mm SLR of the decade when they built the MG the way they did...it's just so,so,so easy to break the film advance linkage on an MG. If you can get the camera to advance the film, be VERY cautious!!! NEVER, ever force an MG to advance the film if it does not want to do so freely and easily.
